

REFACTORING

A digital display device, possibly a small screen or a specialized printer, is shown against a light blue background. The device has a white rectangular display area in the center, which shows the word "TEST" in large, bold, black capital letters. The device's frame is dark grey or black. On the right side of the frame, there are two horizontal slots, likely for paper or a display medium. At the bottom of the device, there is a small control panel with a red power button and a green button. Two cables, one red and one black, are connected to the right side of the device.
